KEELING, Brown Lowe, Pearl Inman and Hally Hall Gandy

Brown was born in the Smokey Mountains of White Oak, Tennessee. His parents, Daniel Marion and Fanny Amanda Keeling, were share croppers in cotton and corn. They lived about five miles from the closest school, which he attended by walking the distance, or riding a stubborn mule. He had two sisters, Ethel and Exieve, and two brothers, Fred and Lyman, the fiddler.

In 1926, he was married to Pearl Inman on Christmas Eve, December 24. In 1928, they came west, rustling work, which he found in the mines in Park City and in Great Lakes Lumber Company in Heber, Utah, then in the beet fields of Idaho.

Hitch-hiking back to Utah, he found employment in the Excelsior Plant, in Charleston, Utah, until he met with a serious accident. Later, after working for the Colorado By-Products Company in Heber, he started his own business of By-Products which he engaged in for nearly 12 years.

Since his retirement, he has enjoyed pursuing his hobby of hunting cougars and bears, and training his hounds. As an expert mountain man, he has been contacted by many groups through out the nation to lead them on hunts for fun and excitement, but that was not his pattern.

Their children are; Thomas Junior, Heber, Ted, living in Kaysville, Utah, Gwen, living in Morgan, and Margie, living in Layton, Utah.

Pearl passed away in April 1956.

Hally was born October 19, 1917, in Arkansas. Her parents are Robert James and Susan Dickinson Hall. She married Joseph Gandy in 1933.

After living in Oregon and Boise, Idaho, she with her husband, Jo and 2 children, moved to Heber in June 1957. He found employment with the Great Lakes Lumber Company but passed away in 1960 with a heart attack.

Hally worked as a hair dresser in Heber and Kamas until she met Brown and they were married August 12, 1961. She also owned and operated a small bookstore for many years.

Her children are; Diane Cochran who lives in Oklahoma, Duane Gandy, living in Arkansas and Rowena Shipley in American Fork, Utah.

Brown and Hally built a new home, north of Heber, where they enjoy and maintain a beautiful yard and garden. Brown still sneaks a little rendezvous in the surrounding hills. 185

BEN LILLY ON THE WEST END

During the last decade or so, no peak or eminence of Uinta's West End has been excluded from the entertainment offered by Brown L. Keeling of Heber, Utah, and his cat trailing hounds. The hounds, of which he has had a hundred or so, could have been cold nosed black and tan, or hot nosed Plott. He has settled for the latter, having seven at this writing.

Bald Knoll, Mt. Heber, Currant Creek Peak, Reid's Peak, Bald Mt. with all its lookouts to Kamas Valley and over the Transition area have been alerted, amused, concerned, and worried, as this lone man with his ever faithful canines has bagged bobcats, cougars, and bears to the almost unbelievable number of "from 700 to 1,000." Of course these would be mostly cats.

How he has escaped the cold, blizzards, darkness, and fangs and claws of these maddened beasts of the wilds—we wonder. No less is the question—how has he escaped the blazing pages of the press? And how come he has done all this, while not one person out of a hundred, we dare say, who claim to have traversed these mountains, has ever seen one of these animals in the wild?

The last question is easily answered for many go through the Uintas without seeing their beauty or tasting their inspiration—they don't look for them. We find what we look for—faults or virtue, hatred or love.

Brown Keeling differs from the great Ben Lilly because conditions are different. Ben became famous in the South West, New Mexico, Arizona and Colorado as an intrepid Grizzly and Wolf hunter. He camped on the trail to its end, stopping in caves each weekend where he Sabbathed with the Bible—one was cached in each of many different caves. He had no family—home was any place.

Our man has always been able to go and come. Good roads have led him to the tell-tale tracks. However, good judgment and strained endurance has sustained him well. But Alas! Times were when the exception hung on a spider web. Thanks to the faithfulness and innate understanding of man's best friend as they unrelentingly tore at the charging beasts, snatching long foaming fangs away in hair-breadth time.

To spend much of a life—from 8 years to 57 hunting with very little monetary remuneration has but one solution—innate love of the game and the solitude, in which it is environed. Yet some will say: "I am a hunter."

Brown Keeling has a comfortable late model house just north of Heber. Call and see his trophies and enjoy his experiences first hand.
